

Green light for head on her bike

A BIRMINGHAM head teacher did her bit for the environment by leaving her car at home for the week.

Sarah Evans, from King Edward VI High

School for Girls in Edgbaston, aimed to set a good example to staff and pupils by relying solely on her bicycle and public transport.

Miss Evans embarked on her two mile challenge as part of the Girls' School Associations' Girls Go Green Week 2008.

A host of other initiatives also took place including the wearing of green accessories for a fee which will be donated to an environmental charity, cutting down on electricity and school assemblies.
